

BRIEFLY

Memorial service to be held

There will be a memorial service for rising sophomore Graham Gould at 2 p.m., Oct. 24 in Wait Chapel.

The entire community is encouraged to attend. Gould was killed in an automobile accident on May 18, near his home in Sanford.

MBA info session to be held

An information session on the university's evening MBA program in Charlotte will be held from 5:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Monday at the university's Charlotte campus, One Morrocroft Centre at South Park. Information on the university's executive MBA program, conducted on weekends on the Winston-Salem campus, will also be available.

Prospective students for both programs are invited to attend. For more information, call (704) 365-1717.

Dijon meeting to take place

Students interested in the university's semester program in Dijon, France are invited to an informational meeting at 4:30 p.m. Oct. 22 in Tribble B216.

Anyone unable to attend should contact Stephen Murphy, an associate professor of Romance Languages and the program director, in Tribble B210, at Ext. 5492 or by e-mail at murphy@wfu.edu.

Pageant meeting to be held

A meeting will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday in Reynolds Gymnasium 210 for students interested in becoming contestants in the Liberian Organization of the Piedmont's sixth annual Ms. Africa/ African-American Educational Pageant.

The event will take place at 8 p.m. Nov. 2 in the Scales Fine Arts Center.

For tickets, call the Black Student Alliance at Ext. 6636.

LEAD applications available

Leadership, Excellence, Application and Development is now taking applications from interested freshmen and sophomores. This learning program of leadership and personal development is offered on eight consecutive Wednesday or Thursday afternoons beginning in January, 1997.

Applications are available in the Student Life office, Benson 311, and the Student Union office, Benson 335. They are due Nov. 11.

Flu shots available for everyone

The influenza vaccine (flu shot) is now available for students and staff at the Student Health Service.

Shots will be available throughout the fall semester at a cost of $8. The university will cover the cost of the vaccine for faculty and staff.

Call Ext. 5218 to make an appointment.

Alumnus to present slide show

John Durham, a Wake Forest and Oxford University alumnus, will present a slide lecture and discussion at 4 p.m. today called "Celebrating Rembrandt," in Scales 102.

Psychology lecture to be held

The department of psychology will be sponsoring a lecture at 3:15 p.m. Wednesday in Winston C. John Dunlosky, a representative from the psychology department at UNC-Greensboro, will present a talk called "Memory Monitoring: The Bases and Accuracy of People Learning."

A social will follow in Winston 236. For more information, call Ext. 5424.

Babcock lecture series to begin

Four business leaders will speak at the Babcock Graduate School of Management during the 1996-97 Babcock Leadership Series. Speakers in the student-run lecture series discuss current issues affecting business.

Each lecture begins at 11:40 a.m. in Room 1312 of the Worrell Professional Center for Law and Management. The public is invited to attend the free lectures.

The next lecture will feature Katherine M. Hudson, the president and CEO of Milwaukee based W.H. Brady Co. on Nov. 1. Hudson is the first female to hold the top position in a major public company in Wisconsin.

Counseling groups offered

The University Counseling Center will be offering the following groups during the fall semester:

African American Women's Support Group; Transition to College, ask for Joyce Harpe.

Adult Children of Alcoholics; Enhancing Relationships (graduate students only); Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Support Group, ask for Alan Cameron.

Life Career Group, ask for Pat Kale.

Positive Body Image and Healthy Eating; Support Group for Women Recovering from Eating Disorders, ask for Johnne Armentrout.

Sexual Assault Support Group, ask for Betsy Taylor.

Call Ext. 5273 if interested.

Carswell scholarships offered

The Committee on Scholarships and Student Aid invites sophomores, juniors and seniors with outstanding records to become Thomas E. and Ruth Mullen Scholars of the Upperclass Carswell Scholarships.

These scholarships carry an annual stipend of $1,500; once awarded they can be renewed for the remainder of the student's undergraduate education.

Deadline for application is Tuesday.

Table tennis, anyone?

Freshman Tim Fuller focuses his attention on a game of ping-pong in the game room.

LeeAnn Hodges

Group reviews judicial system

Judicial Council forms new committee to consider reforms

By EMILY BREWER
ASSISTANT NEWS EDITOR

As part of efforts to improve the university's judicial system, the Judicial Council has created a committee to propose reforms for the system.

For the past 18 months, the council has been compiling opinions about reform needed for the judicial system through interviews with representatives from all parts of the system.

These problems, such as a lack of faith in the honor system and inconsistent penalties, were drafted in a document prepared by a Student Government task force.

The document proposes a set honor pledge and several mechanical changes in the system, William Hamilton, an associate dean of the college, said.

"This puts us at a point where we think we have already identified the problems, and it seems to be time to propose solutions," Hamilton said.

A committee composed of seven people is currently working to propose changes to the judicial system. "The group will study models used at other colleges, and is quite willing to consider proposing their adoption. They will also take a close look at the details of last year's SG proposal," Hamilton said.

According to Hamilton, who is

"We go through cycles of identifying problems, proposing changes and trying to get those changes agreed to by all parties, especially the students."

William Hamilton
Associate dean of the college serving as the chairman of the Judicial Council, the judicial system is constantly undergoing evaluation and change.

"We go through cycles of identifying problems, proposing changes and trying to get those changes agreed to by all parties, especially the students," Hamilton said.

Although the committee hopes to complete the review by February, there is no set deadline, Hamilton said.

"Experience has shown that if a working committee proposes something in a hurry, trying to meet the deadlines that come later in the spring, much can go wrong," Hamilton said.

Members of the committee include Robert Lovett, a professor of English and the chairman of the committee; James Powell, an assistant professor of classical languages; Ken Zick, the vice president for student life and instructional resources; senior David Sims, a student member of the Judicial Council; senior Tripp Parker, the chairman of the Honor Council; senior Tracey Abbott, a co-chairwoman of the Judicial Board; and senior Matthew Coleman, a co-chairman of the judiciary committee of Student Government. Harold Holmes, the associate vice president and the dean of student services and Clay Hipp, the judicial advisor, are serving as ex officio members.

Students wishing to offer suggestions or comments to the committee should direct them to Hamilton via e-mail at "hamilton@wfu.edu".

Student interest in Screamin' Demons soars

By FRANK WILSON
CONTRIBUTING REPORTER

There were very few empty seats in Brendle Recital Hall when the Screamin' Demons had their sign-up meeting on Monday night. Unfortunately, the record turnout caused some concern that there might not be enough space in the organization for all interested students.

The group has been very popular in recent years. There had never been a serious concern about not being able to accommodate everyone that was interested, though. An estimated 925 applications for 700 spots were handed out.

The leaders of the Screamin' Demons expected more interest than in previous years but was still surprised by how many students came to the meeting. "We were just really impressed with how many showed up. Definitely more than we have ever had," senior John Dawkins said.

"We knew there would be a lot of interest," said senior Lori Shores, a Screamin' Demons usher. She cited the number of questions about the group before the meeting as an indication that there would be far more students interested than there were last year.

Men's basketball head coach Dave Odom was extremely pleased by the turnout. "I think you have a passion ... for Wake Forest basketball," he said to the group.

Some speculated that concern about the new basketball ticket policy contributed to interest in Screamin' Demons. Students may see the guaranteed seats in Screamin' Demons as a safe alternative to the chancy lottery, which does not guarantee students tickets.

Members are expected to attend all but one home game in the first semester. They are also required to go to all but one men's game in the second semester. Finally, they must be in the stands for three of four important women's games. They must arrive 30 minutes before the game and may not leave until the game ends. Those breaking these rules risk expulsion from the group.

Returning members will be given priority in membership. Other students will then be selected based upon how quickly they returned their forms.

Odom announced a special bonus for those members who submitted their forms and $10 membership fee by Wednesday. Members with their forms turned in were eligible for a lottery drawing Wednesday night. The winner will take a shot from halfcourt as a part of ESPN's Midnight Madness Monday. If the student makes the shot, he or she will win free tuition for the next school year, paid for by ESPN.

Midnight Madness is a program which televises the first basketball practices of the year at several universities. These practices take place as early as they can under NCAA rules. The practice will be in Reynolds Gym, and admission will be first-come, first serve. The doors are tentatively scheduled to open at 11:15 p.m. Monday, and the practice will begin at midnight.

Bryan Herring

Practice makes perfect

Sophomore Peter Krogh and junior Amanda Welborn practice their mellophones for the marching band. The band will perform an '80's Medley at the Homecoming game against Navy Oct. 26.

WAKE WATCH

If you have a question, send mail to P.O. Box 7569, e-mail news@ogb.wfu.edu or call us at Ext. 5280

By Elizabeth D. Fisher

What exactly are those new Smoothie shakes in the Pit? Does the Fatburner really work? — R.T.

By now, most students have heard of the newest fad to hit the university since toilet paper in the trees — Smoothies. In the Pit's quest to replace old food items with new selections that appeal to students, Smoothies have been a booming success.

Each week, the Pit sells between 600 and 900 Smoothie drinks, said assistant location manager Matt Bischoff. Even if you haven't tasted one yet, you've at least heard the whizz of the Smoothie blender during your evening meal.

What really is a Smoothie?

A product of the General Nutrition Center, Smoothies are shakes made from a fruit juice or yogurt base and mixed with additives such as carbohydrate powder, fatburner, or protein powder. There are 15 different types of Smoothies, ranging from the "Arnold" to the "Waistwatcher."

A word of caution to those of you watching your waists: a diet of Smoothies with fatburner will not transform your figure into your ideal body in minutes. Or even years.

Uses for old ThinkPads considered

By HEATHER MACKAY
OLD GOLD AND BLACK REPORTER

With the implementation of the Plan for the Class of 2000, the university will repeatedly have an excess of laptop computers at the end of each school year as students' machines are replaced every two years. The question remains about what to do with the used computers, which are the property of the school.

A few options are currently open to the university. According to Jay Dominick, the assistant vice president and chief information officer, the university is in the process of finding the best place to sell or donate the used ThinkPads.

The university is considering giving some of the computers to university staff or selling them to graduate students.

Another option being considered is selling the computers to the local school system. Dominick said that the university would like to help the Winston-Salem community implement the same degree of technology the university has acquired.

According to Dominick, the university has had a couple of talks with the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County schools, and the district is interested in buying the machines.

Don Martin, the superintendent of the Winston-Salem/Forsyth County schools, said that a proposal was presented to the Board of Education and they are very much in favor of buying the used ThinkPads.

Martin said that they are working out a contract for the purchase and that the issue right now is determining a proper method for pricing. "I have high hopes that we'll have the contract finished this month, in October," Martin said. It will not be approved, however, until the board's first meeting in November, he said.

Dominick said the university is concerned with establishing a fair price. He said that they probably will not know a price until a month or so before they sell because of the constantly changing nature of technology.

"We've got to make sure that there's a regular place we can sell them to," Dominick said.

The university wants to be able to sell 700-800 at a time to a known customer at a known price, he said.

According to Martin, the school district wants to give the computers to the teachers. They plan to give the computers to new teachers first. Martin said he hopes the used ThinkPads can be used as recruiting tools to attract new teachers to the district. Eventually they intend to give every teacher a laptop, Martin said.

Dominick said that selling the computers to the school systems seems like the right thing to do with them. The schools have little technology, and the computers would be helpful to them. At this time in Winston-Salem there is a proposal which would incorporate the schools, libraries and universities of the city by computerization. Claudette Weston, a representative of Weston Associates, is involved in this idea of a city-wide network. She recently made a presentation to the Chamber of Commerce.