

Poor play lands Deacon golfers second place finish

Women's team surrenders lead on final day to ACC rival Duke

The Demon Deacon women's golf team went into the Lady Tar Heel Invitational last weekend in Chapel Hill and firmly established its position as one of the elite teams in the ACC, finishing second in the sixteen team field.

The Demon Deacons led the tournament after the first round, as senior Alexandra Armas, junior Nicole Stillig and junior Trina Casburn were all tied for third place.

The team remained in first place after two rounds, three strokes ahead of Memphis and 10 ahead of eventual champion Duke.

However, on the final day, the Deacs could not finish as well as they had started, and had to use scores of 78 and 83 on the final day of the team competition, where the best four out of five individual scores each day count towards the team total.

The Deacons finished just three strokes behind conference rival Duke University, who is currently one of the hottest teams in the nation. In third place, two strokes behind the Deacons, was another bitter ACC rival, the Tar Heels of North Carolina.

In the individual competition, Deacon senior Alexandra Armas once again put together a very solid tournament, finishing in second place with a three-day total of 215, four strokes behind Jenny Chuasisiporn of Duke, who won the tournament last weekend as well.

The most important factor the Deacons' performance in addition to the always stellar play of Armas, was the steady play of the rest of the team, which in recent weeks has been lacking.

Junior Nicole Stillig was right behind Armas in the individual standings, finishing in a third-place tie with a three day total of 218, which was one-under par on the par-73 Finley Golf Course. Sophomore Kelly Kirwin also contributed three solid rounds, ending in a tie for 23rd place.

Head Coach Dianne Dailey discussed the team's bittersweet finish, playing very well overall, but coming up just shy of a victory.

"The first two days we played very well. We set a school and tournament record," Dailey said about the fact that the team was in first place after two rounds.

"We were disappointed we didn't win. We were in position to win."

Dailey added that this weekend's finish, which was a combined team effort rather than a reliance on Armas, was a definite step in the right direction. "It was so encouraging to see not one person shooting in the 60s and the rest in the mid-70s, but a real solid team effort."

Two cheerleaders, sophomore David Simms and junior Tabitha Jones, show their support for the Demon Deacon football team. This weekend the Deacs will need all the support they can get as they face the Tar Heels of North Carolina, who are currently ranked fifth in the nation. The game will constitute the Deacs' toughest test so far this season.
