

AT A GLANCE

A brief look at what went on around campus and the Winston-Salem community this week.

UPS will open in January on the Hearn Plaza

A UPS store will open at the university in January that will provide enhanced services and operating hours to the Reynolda Campus community.

The UPS store will assume many of the responsibilities now handled by the university's Mail Services department, while offering additional services and products to students, faculty, staff and others. It will operate on Hearn Plaza in the upper level of the space now occupied by Mail Services in Poteat House.

In the lower level of Poteat, the university will continue to operate a Mail Services center. The center will coordinate delivery and pick up of departmental mail, outgoing bulk mail and Federal Express services.

The Mail Services department employs 11 staff members. This change will reduce the number of full-time university employees in that department.

Ultimately, the university will hire four full-time staff members to operate the reorganized Mail Services department. Current employees are eligible to apply for those four positions, and they have been informed of that opportunity. They may also apply for employment with UPS.

In addition, the university's Human Resources department will work closely with current employees in the Mail Services department regarding other open positions at the university for which they qualify.

The store will provide general services and products normally associated with UPS and the United States Postal Service (USPS), including postage stamp sales, USPS mail services, parcel shipping, packaging supplies and services and mailbox services. Other offerings will include Western Union services and products, American Express money orders, fax services, passport photographs and expedited services, laminating, notary public services, and UPS move-in/move-out services for students.

Renovations of the campus post office area will be completed during winter break in order to open in January 2006.

Mock Trial places fourth at competition

The Wake Forest Mock Trial Team placed fourth at a tournament held by the University of Richmond over the weekend. The team, composed of eight university students, competed against 17 teams from eight different schools.

Among the schools in attendance were Duke University, Washington & Lee University, the University of Richmond and the University of Georgia.

Heidi Urness represented the university team and was given a perfect score and ranked the number one individual of the tournament.

According to the president of the organization, Danny Budasoff, "Mock trial is very much like what you see in Law & Order."

"It requires theatrics and a firm grasp of courtroom procedure and the law," he said.

This year's fictional case, as provided by the American Mock Trial Association, deals with the kidnapping of a child and a close family friend charged with the kidnapping.

At the tournament the team argued four cases, two for the prosecution and two for the defense.

Budasoff said he attributed the early success to the coaching and dedication of the members. The entire team has 16 members and five coaches. Three of the coaches are law students, one is a local practicing attorney and the other is a faculty member.

The team plans on attending at least two more tournaments, the Georgia Tech University Invitational Tournament and the Furman University Invitational Tournament at the end of January.
